

Air and Space Industry in Querétaro, Mexico

May 8-14, 2022

Open to Engineering students in ME, AAE, the Polytechnic, and other related majors

Overview

Universidad Aeronáutica en Querétaro (UNAQ) is a public university in the state of Querétaro, Mexico with 14 years of experience training professionals and researchers for the Aeronautical Sector. Learn about different aeronautical topics such as maintenance, manufacturing, and design in the different UNAQ labs as well as visiting different aeronautical companies. Several cultural excursions are included.

Activities include:

- Querétaro City Tour, Presentation and Tour at UNAQ, Welcome dinner
- Workshop in aircraft maintenance, Visit Techop MRO, Cheese and Wine tasting in Tequisquiapan
- Visit to CENTA, Aerocluster of Querétaro talk, Tour of Bernal
- Visit Safran Co., Manufacturing and Design workshop, Mexican Party with UNAQ students
- Tours and activities in Mexico City

Students

Students in ME, AAE, the Polytechnic, and other related majors, Sophomores to Seniors are invited to apply. There are 14 spots maximum.

Travel Overseas

Group flight from Chicago to Mexico City. UNAQ is arranging all aspects of the program and subsidizing a sizeable portion the cost with a 100K Strong in the Americas Grant.

Scholarships

Purdue Moves Scholarships available. Check the "Financial Resources" tab on the Study Abroad website.

Academic Details

Students earn 2 credits for ENGR 39697. Students must check with their academic advisor to see how this course can be used in your plan of study.

Cost

The program fee is estimated at $1,700 which includes: Airfare, Hotels, most meals (except weekend) all course activities and cultural activities on the itinerary, all ground transportation in Mexico, academic credits, and international health insurance.

Additional expenses: Passport, a few meals, personal activities, personal spending money, and transportation to and from Chicago O'Hare.

Application link and info:

